April 29th Set for Ventura's Earth Day Celebration

Ventura's 2007 Earth Day and "Curb Global Warming" event will be held on Sunday, April 29th from 11am to 5pm at Mission Park in downtown Ventura.

In celebration of World Earth Day, this local event will be jointly hosted by the Ventura Charter School of Arts and Global Education, VCCOOL (Ventura Climate Care Options Organized Locally) and the City of Ventura.

Admission to this community eco-event is free and will include entertainment, children's activities, a silent auction, refreshments, global warming project displays and volunteer-recruitment opportunities, "New Games" (non-competitive community-building events) and information booths.

All funds raised will support Ventura Charter School of Arts and Global Education, whose mission is to prepare students to be active citizens of the 21st century and see themselves as interconnected and interdependent members of a diverse, global community.
